COMMUNICATION PROBLEM

Blacks total less than one per cent of all engineers

By ROBERT SCHMIDT
U.T. Copy Editor

Of the 840,000 engineers in the United States, less than 7,000 are black.

Although blacks comprise 11 per cent of the total U.S. population, they comprise less than one per cent of the engineers in the U.S.

Engineering is the second largest profession in the U.S., second only to teaching and the highest-paid municipal employees in Southern California are engineers.

Blacks in the engineering field average $1,200 a month in Los Angeles and $1,100 a month nationally, as a starting salary.

The employment rate in the engineering field is very high; there is always a shortage of qualified engineers.

With these facts in mind, how is the low representation of blacks in engineering explained?

One of the biggest problems in the field of engineering is the lack of communication.

"Corporations are putting out material, but students aren't being put in touch with them," according to Willie Simmons, senior civil engineering student, and national treasurer for the National Society of Black Engineers (NSBE).

The NSBE, a student organization, seeks to develop and assist precollege and college programs which increase minority participation in the field of engineering. It also encourages professional development among its members.

"Most blacks now make up the first generation of college graduates for black families," according to Simmons.

Judge refuses Allaway change of venue request

SANTA ANA, CALIF. (UPI)—A bid by the defense to move the scheduled trial of a university janitor accused of seven campus killings out of Orange County was rejected today by a superior court judge.

Judge Robert P. Kneeland denied the motion after a week of pretrial hearings and scheduled March 7 as the trial date for Edward Charles Allaway, 37, of Anaheim.

Allaway has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to seven counts of murder and two counts of assault with a deadly weapon. He was being held at the county jail without bail.

Judge Kneeland said he was not convinced that heavy newspaper and television

Another problem facing black engineering students is "little support from the families," Simmons said.

Financial problems plague all college students, but blacks are hit harder due to some families limited resources.

"Also," Simmons said, "people tend to base their career on role models—they see teachers everyday, but not engineers."

CSLA has one of the largest black engineering student enrollments in the Southern California area.

"Students at CSLA need to be better informed about their opportunities in the engineering field," Simmons said.

CSLA's black student engineering organization is the Council of Black Engineering, Math and Science Students. (CBEMSS).

The CBEMSS membership is comprised of 140 students majoring in engineering, math and natural science.

The objectives of the CBEMSS are tutoring, test filing, job placement and recruitment programs.

CSLA's School of Engineering is accredited by the Engineer's Council for Professional Development.

It offers programs leading to B.S. and M.S. degrees in the three main branches of engineering: civil, mechanical and electrical.

According to Simmons, "CSLA practical engineers are respected worldwide."

Further information concerning blacks in the engineering field may be obtained by calling Simmons at 224-2438.

coverage of the killings of seven persons and the wounding of two others on the Fullerton campus last July 12 had ruled out the possibility of a fair trial.

Authorities said Allaway took a rifle to the school library on the campus where he had been employed as a janitor and shot nine university workers in a 45-minute random shooting spree.

The defense had asked the judge to move the trial to either Los Angeles County or a large country in Northern California.

Public Defender Ron Butler told Kneeland that if Los Angeles County could try mass murderer Charles Manson and his family, then it could try Allaway fairly and impartially.

Israeli explains goals of kibbutz experiment

"Doing whatever you can or whatever you must for the common good, that is the idea behind the kibbutz," according to Johanan Maoz, a representative of the Kibbutz Aliyah in Israel.

Maoz spoke last week in the Student Union as part of the Jewish Awareness Series, sponsored by Cal State L.A.'s Hillel Society.

He gave students a short history of the Kibbutz both in film and in lectures, calling it "the great social experiment of the century."

"In Israel," Maoz pointed out, "people who live on the kibbutz represent only three to four per cent of the population, but their influence is very extensive. Several ministers in the government are products of the kibbutz."

Maoz has been in the United States for about seven months and will spend another year-and-a-half relating his experiences on the kibbutz and enlisting interested students in coming to Israel and participating in the experiment.

"The first kibbutz was established in 1909," Maoz said. "It consisted of just poor people, but since then, it has grown into a social democratic movement."

Farm board lax in investigating unfair practices

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Farm union leader Cesar Chavez has complained to members of the Agricultural Labor Relations Board that the board is moving too slowly on hundreds of unfair labor practices charges filed by farm workers against farmers.

In his first appearance in many months at the boards offices, the president of the United Farm Workers of America also said the board is not certifying farm workers representation elections fast enough. Certification is needed before a labor union can negotiate a contract with a farmer.

Board Chairperson Gerald Brown denied that the board is dragging its feet.

He noted the board was without money to conduct its business for five months last year because the legislature refused to provide emergency funding.

Brown reported 166 unfair practices charges have been filed since the board started accepting them again in November and 500 were on file when it had to close down temporarily. He said 24 cases have been settled since the board resumed its operations, 48 are being heard and 50 have been scheduled for hearing.

"Right now in Israel there are three kibbutz movements, but I hope that in the future they might all combine," he added.

As with all experiments there are problems that develop in the kibbutz. Because of the nature of the communal system, there is a lack of personal privacy at times but intense personal relationships do develop.

JOHANAN MAOZ

The work ethic is strong in the kibbutz and Maoz says the philosophy for each worker is simple: "From each according to his own ability, to each according to his needs."

All decisions in the kibbutz are made at weekly meetings by all the members. When a question is raised, it is put to the general assembly and a show of hands decides the matter.

One very important aspect of this communal society is its commitment to equality, regardless of sex. Everyone chips in to accomplish a common goal.

This is particularly important to the children of the kibbutz who are perhaps the focal point of the entire experiment.

Children learn early the importance of contributing. They know all members of the commune and all members know them, making for one big happy family.

According to Maoz, it is relatively inexpensive to participate in an Israeli kibbutz. Most of the programs, which generally last six months, require only that round-trip plane fare be paid.

"After that," he said, "the kibbutz takes care of all your needs."

No matter how many people come and go in the kibbutz, however, the ideals on which it was founded remain and the philosophy behind it makes the goal of oneness a reality.

NUMBER ONE—Nina Myatch, head of duplicating services, has worked for Cal State L.A. longer than any of the university's employees. She recently received a certificate of recognition from President John A. Greenlee to commemorate her 25 years of service.

Student input wanted for faculty promotions

Many faculty members in the School of Letters and Science are being considered for promotion in their departments, which are seeking student input.

The departments of biology, chemistry, foreign languages and literatures, geography and urban studies, geology, history, mathematics, microbiology and public health, Pan-African studies, philosophy, physics, political science, psychology, sociology and speech communication and drama will be holding promotion hearings.

Students who wish to provide information regarding faculty members in these departments should check the departments' bulletin boards.

The departments have established deadlines by which student comments must be received. Those deadlines will be indicated on the bulletin boards.

'Freaky Friday'- Times critic Champlin speaks here Thursday

Unless you're stuck taking a sibling to the Saturday matinee, avoid "Freaky Friday."

Although amusing, it is meant as entertainment for ages 14 and under. The children loved it. But for adults, it creates an overwhelming impatience to see the end.

Regenerating the theme of the age-old generation gap, we are told to have understanding and sympathy and try to see life from another's perspective.

Barbara Harris (who appeared as Albuquerque in "Nashville") portrays Ellen Andrews, a 35-year-old suburban housewife who believes Annabel, her 13-year-old daughter, played by Jodie Foster ("Taxi Driver"), leads a carefree life. Annabel, of course, assumes her mother wiles away the day watching television.

On Friday the 13th (what else?) the mother and daughter say simultaneously, "I'd change places with HER any day of the week." And they do. Suddenly there is a 13-year-old body with a 35-year-old mind and a 35-year-old body with a 13-year-old mind.

However, no one but they know the change occurred. Comedy results from the incongruity of the mind/body switch while husband and friends try to cope with their strange behavior.

The daughter is overwhelmed with deep mysteries, such as properly loading a washing machine, and consequently mixes nylon stockings and silk blouses with shag rugs and tattered tennis sneakers.

Barbara is excellent as a child in woman's clothing, although she borders on appearing more drunk than befuddled. Foster's performance is good, but not as memorable.

Charles Champlin, entertainment editor and principal film critic for the Los Angeles Times, will speak at noon Thursday in E.I. A631.

A critic of reknown himself, Champlin will speak for an hour on the subject of "Are Critics Necessary?"

Champlin's experience ranges from the coverage of the first Cicero, Ill. race riot in 1951, to the first major American feature stories on such celebrities as Julie Christie, Peter O'Toole, Sean Connery and The Beatles.

Champlin's education at Harvard College was interrupted by World War II. He served in combat and won several battle stars and a Purple Heart. He received his degree in 1948.

Upon graduation Champlin was hired by Time, Inc. and served in their London, Los Angeles, New York, Chicago, and Denver bureaus over a period of 17 years.

In 1965 Champlin joined the Los Angeles Times where he now contributes a column three or four times weekly.

Champlin's main interest is in films, filmmakers, and film personalities, but he also writes about all the lively arts.

T.V. RETROSPECT

Impressive impact of 'Roots' reviewed billed as the "saga of an American family." It traced the ancestry of a black family from its native roots in West Africa to slavery in the United States and finally freedom in the post-Civil War South.

Admittedly, it was a tough assignment to watch every minute of the saga. However, if you were fortunate enough to catch even one segment, it was a wholly rewarding experience.

"Roots" was every history book you have ever read on slavery dramatically and shockingly brought before your very eyes.

It has been criticized for being not entirely accurate, that it did not go far enough.

Others said it did not faithfully recreate the book, but something is always lost in the translation from literature to T.V. script.

What is important about "Roots" is that it brought to light a much misunderstood and troubled era in American history.

It unveiled the seamy and ruthless side of all of us. It was at once a sickening tale of horror, a saga of truth, and hope for the future.

Alex Haley spent 12 years researching his background for this powerful novel. It may now stand as the most significant piece of literature of the 20th century.

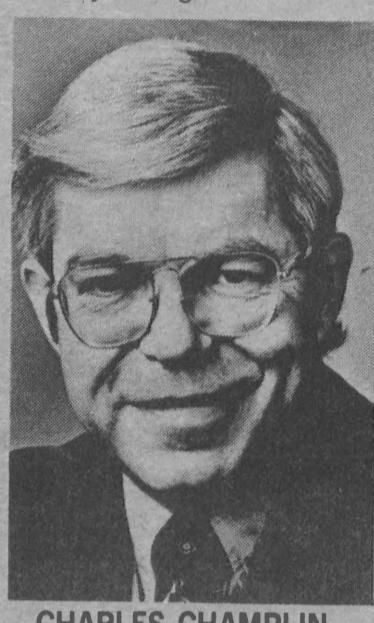

For its effect on the American people it probably will surpass Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which was written just prior to the Civil War.

One can only hope that the incredible injustice of that period in our history will never occur again, that the passage of time will not dull the sense of shame and indignation felt while watching "Roots."

For those who thought slavery was something that happened long ago and is irrelevant in today's society, think again!

Roots is a story for all time which graphically illustrates the old adage: "seeing is believing."

Ex-cons form PINTO club

"PINTO Club" is brand new and on the move at Cal State L.A.

PINTO is a slang word for people in prison and is the official name for the parole program which offers assistance to offenders and ex-offenders helping them make adjustments socially and economically.

Cumire Anthony, a student advisor for PINTO, is the acting president until the general membership election can be held Feb. 4, 1977, Friday, at noon in Ad. 117. The new club is not exclusively for PINTO members, but open to everyone.

Among the ideas being thought about are the possibilities of having a hunting or fishing outing, and several fund raising events. Months back, the PINTOs participated in a telefund. More telefunds are being anticipated.

Charles O. Ryee, director of PINTO, feels socialization plays a vital role in the readjustment an ex-offender has to make back into society, and this club opens up that opportunity to meet other students with the same interests. Anthony said, "The new club will help bridge the gap felt between PINTOs."
