Alumni are no-show at 10-year reunion

By ROBERT SPRINGER

The first 10-year reunion ever held at Cal State L.A., Saturday night, failed to attract a single member of the class of 1974.

James R. Stofan, director of alumni affairs, said the disappointing turnout was not unexpected. He had called some of the members of the class of '74 and found out there wasn't a great deal of enthusiasm about the event. Some alumni said they just weren't interested. Others said that although they had attended CSLA, they did not want anything more to do with the school.

When told that no one was going to come to the reunion, Frank W. Wylie, director of public affairs, said it would take time to develop a reputation and a following among the alumni. He also mentioned that many schools, besides CSLA, have problems attracting active alumni.

Donald Moore, president of the Alumni Association and a '74 graduate, attended the event and had a great deal to say on why CSLA alumni are so apathetic about their former school.

"The problem we have with the alumni of CSLA is the majority of students never really identify with the university," Moore said. "I was working full-time and I didn't think that CSLA was a school that I would return to. I wasn't going to become an active member of the Alumni Association."

He doesn't think alumni besides CSLA, have problems attracting active alumni. Another way to make the alumni become more involved with the school, Moore said, would be to have a winning football team.

"If a team is successful, their name will be in the paper and people will identify with them. They (alumni) are going to tell their friends and are going to be proud of it," Moore said.

He doesn't think that CSLA will return for a reunion if the school doesn't have a winning basketball program.

Moore believes that the alumni membership drive will be successful in the next two or three years even though the situation looks grim now. He attributes this to the increased services offered by the Alumni Association and its better visibility in the community.

Early-morning meetings, long hours, campus events part of Rosser's day

By MARGIE TIRITILLI

Students attending Cal State L.A. know they have a good university. Whatever they ask, they say, is the answer to the question is CSLA President James M. Rosser.

Under Dr. Rosser's leadership, positive things are happening on campus. For instance, some 500 students will live in the option apartments on campus next fall. The housing units are ready during the summer quarter.

In his travels around the world, Rosser said he has seen that it is important to provide a timely response to all questions since CSLA operates on the quarter system where things tend to go faster.

He also attends a series of meetings held by the California State University system. Some of these are Executive Council meetings with other CSU presidents and the chancellor, goals and objectives for the universities are established at these sessions.

Another duty Rosser takes seriously is his civic and community responsibilities. Although they are not directly associated with CSLA, he feels that by maintaining these responsibilities, he helps enhance the image of the school.

Rosser stresses the importance of extending ourselves beyond the geographic areas of our community. He said he encourages faculty and students to become involved in the communities in which they live.

He also attends a series of meetings held by the California State University system. Some of these are Executive Council meetings with other CSU presidents and the chancellor. Goals and objectives for the universities are established at these sessions.

Rosser said he also devotes time to developing a good relationship with the state legislature and the Los Angeles area. He said he has had support from local legislators as well as CSLA alumni.

Evening events often require his presence, and he sees them as another way to present a strong image of CSLA's service to the community. One such public relations activity was Alhambra High School's commencement last year at CSLA.

Other places that help CSLA's reputation, Rosser said, are the faculty's and staff's involvement with the Boy Scouts, summer youth programs on campus.

The addition of a new medical staff enabled Cal State L.A.'s Center for Health and Personal Services to extend its hours from 4:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The new hours will allow students to take advantage of family planning programs and other services offered by the Alumni Association and health services.

CSLA is one of the few campuses to offer ophthalmology services, as well as X-rays, physical therapy, psychological counseling and orthopedic, dermatology and blood tests.

Appointments are necessary for services offered by the Health Center. Depending on the services, a student may be charged a nominal fee.

John Le Valley, director of health and personal services, said that 10 years ago CSLA had a very small health center that he was forced to close. But he said that CSLA was able to attract a very good staff, and that the center is now one of the best in the area.

Navy guns fired to back Gemayel

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. Navy guns are firing into the Beirut area in direct support of the embattled Lebanese government rather than to simply protect American Marines, Navy Secretary John Lehman said today.

"There's very definitely been a shift in emphasis to make it clear that we will be providing supporting fire to American Marines," Lehman said in a breakfast meeting with reporters. "It is not linked to specific fire at the Marines.

Lehman's statement came after some of the administration's public justification for the heavy shelling last week by the battleship New Jersey and a destroyer.

President Reagan, in announcing Feb. 7 that the Marines would be redeployed from the Beirut airport to ships offshore, said Navy guns would be used to "enhance the safety of Americans and other tend to the grasp, and we will be providing fire in support of the Lebanese government rather than strictly in support of U.S. forces.

British Court upholds extradition

LONDON (AP)—A British high court Tuesday refused to block the extradition of an American who is accused of killing two San Francisco men and trying to kill a third. Lawyers for Ernest Kirkwood said they might ask to appeal the ruling before the House of Lords, Britain's highest appeals court.

U.S. marshals sent to return Kirkwood to San Francisco heart two judges refuse to apply for a writ of habeas corpus delaying extradition.

Kirkwood, 41, is wanted in connection with the July 24, 1982 shooting deaths of Leonard Jones and Cleophas Lovett of San Francisco. He is being held in London's Brixton Prison.

His attorney, Colin Nicholls, argued that the extradition warrant served by the British home secretary was unlawful because the treatment he faced in the United States would, in Britain, be a breach of the European Convention on Human Rights.

If convicted, Kirkwood could spend a long time on death row, which the convention defines as "inhuman and debilitating," Nicholls said. Kirkwood's case is to be considered by the human rights commission March 7 or 8.

But the judges said Britain should not be a haven for offenders, and said they were satisfied that the home secretary had properly considered his decision.

CSLA nine playing out of their league

By MARIO VILEGAS

Maybe Cal State L.A.'s baseball team should be allowed to return to the Southern California Baseball Association. As part of a major reorganization plan adopted by CSCLA's department of intercollegiate athletics last spring, the baseball team left the prestigious SCBA, an NCAA Division II conference, and became a member of the California Collegiate Athletic Association, a Division II conference.

But a new coaching staff has meant new hope for the Golden Eagle baseball program. Under new head coach John O. Herbold, the Eagles have won six of their first 10 games. They will attempt to make it 7 in 11 today when they play former SCBA rival UC Irvine at 2:30 p.m. at Earl Wilson Stadium.

They feel like they can beat anybody." We're most definitely pleased," Larry Harper, the Eagles' assistant coach, said. "Our pitching really has been outstanding over the last few games, and we're going to do. But since our series with Arizona State, we really proved to ourselves that we are a good team.''

After losing its first three games of the season, CSLA has won all four of its games thus far at Reeder Field, with wins over Cal State Long Beach (7-5), Pepperdine (7-5), Southern California College (9-7) and San Francisco State (4-3).

The win over Long Beach and Pepperdine were really gratifying for the Eagles. In two five-game series with the SCBA schools last season, CSCLA was swept by both of them.

"We're most definitely pleased," Larry Harper, assistant coach, said. "Our pitching really has been outstanding over the last few games, and we're going to do. But since our series with Arizona State, we really proved to ourselves that we are a good team.''

After losing its first three games of the season, including two against powerful Arizona State, CSLA emerged from them with a 3-0 record.

At this point last season, the Eagles were 3-7.

"They really feel good about themselves," Harper said. "They feel like they can beat anybody."

A big reason for that feeling is the pitching of senior right-hander Joe Butler, an outstanding defensive player, who has 25 strikeouts, including a personal best of 11 against Long Beach, to his credit.

Overall, however, there has been tremendous improvement between this season and last—strong pitching, consistent defense, timely hitting and a newly found confidence among the players.

Despite a 9-4 loss in 11 innings at the University of San Diego, the Eagles received another excellent pitching performance, this one coming from reliever Sergio Martinez.

In relief, the senior right-hander pitched 6 1/3 innings without allowing a hit. He earned the win over Southern California College and in 18 innings of work he has an earned run average of 0.75.

At San Diego, the Eagles returned the favor in the second game of a doubleheader by edging the Toreros, 1-0, in a game that was called after five innings due to darkness.

Junior right-hander Mike Whitney notched the win as he threw a one-hitter. Marci Monteros scored the only run of the game. After leading off with a double in the fourth, the first baseman took third on a fielder's choice and scored on an error.

Monteros was the hero of the Southern California College contest when he led off the 10th inning with a home run on an 0-2 pitch.

Freshman Joe Butler, an outstanding defensive infielder who has found a home at second base, has had a hot bat. He leads the squad with a .414 batting average and leads with runs scored with 10.

In a nail-biting win over Long Beach Friday, CSLA tallied two runs in its half of the eighth with Arzola taking third. Mike Overby, who had collected two hits and scored three runs, in three previous at-bats, grounded into a double play with Arzola taking third.

Butler stepped up and delivered the game-winning hit when he singled to left scoring Arzola. Rich Munoz ensured the win with a smashing opposite field double to left that scored Butler from first.
